IN THE NECK,

Over the Eyes, Under the Chin and on the Nose Did Frank Euth

Plant His Flat Against Neighbor Haggemann--A Family Quarrel That Ended in a Bloody Fight in an Alley Off East Fourth Street Monday.

For sometime past there has been bad blood among some of the families who reside on East Fourth street above Gay and several family quarrels have occurred to the amusement of some but disgusting to the better class. Mrs. Frank Euth and Mrs. Charles Haggemann, have been the main participants. They live opposite each other and have managed to keep the street between them indulging in a war of words, instead of hair pulling. A few evenings ago, while they were at their frequent pastime of abusing each other across the street etc. The husbands of each took a hand and exchanged a few words at long range, with the promise to see each other later.

It was late yesterday evening when they met in the alley near the residence of Jacob Yinger. The meeting was not as pleasant as it might have been and without exchanging many words, they went at each other in genuine pugilistic style. Several blows were passed without much damage on either side except to show that in the science of boxing Euth could excel his antagonist, but when the clinched, Haggemann was not in it. Euth handled him like he was a child, and soon had him down and was giving him red hot blows right and left. When Haggemann called for help, Jacob Yinger was in the rear of his lot and hearing the cry of "took him off, he kill me" run out and attempted to pull Euth off but was unable to do it. Other help arrived and Mr. Euth was persuaded to cease his pugilistic practice on the face of his neighbor. While Euth was hardly scratched and Haggemann received no serious injuries, he will carry a pair of black eyes and a bruised face for several days as a reminder that he came out second best. Charges will be preferred against both of them and they will be given the opportunity of contributing of their finances to the help of running the city government.

Mr. Euth went before Squire Shakespear this morning and pleaded guilty to a charge of assault and battery and paid his fine of $5 and costs.

NEILL.

Mrs. Elizabeth Richardson Neill died at 2:45 yesterday afternoon, at the Neill residence, corner Market and Third streets. She was the wife of John Neill and mother of Councilman Neill. The deceased was 72 years old and was born near Zanesville. She came to this city in 1853, and this has since been her home. She was a Christian lady of high character and was loved by all who knew her. The husband and five children survive her--John, Jr., George, Edward, Anna and Lizzie. Three sisters survive--Mrs. John M. Lynn, of this city, and Mrs. Thomas Black, of Circleville, and one brother, Mr. B. F. Richardson, of this city.

The time for the funeral is as yet undecided, but it will probably take place from the residence tomorrow afternoon, at 3 o'clock.

CRABTREE.

Kendall Crabtree, an old soldier living near Sedan, died Saturday from injuries received during the war. He was sixty-three years old. The funeral took place Sunday.

STURTZINGER.

The deceased was eighty-two years old, and the mother of Jacob Sturtzinger, of East Fourth street, this city. She was born in Neidorschstadt, Germany. The remains will be brought here for burial. The funeral will be held at the residence of her son on East Fourth street, this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Poor Old Foolish Chris.

An old fellow named Christian Halderman from up in Jackson county attracted much attention Monday evening up town. He had his shoes off and persisted in going into every yard along the street and dancing on the lawn. He was locked up as crazy. He seemed to be all right this morning and was released and sent over into Kentucky. The poor fellow's mind is affected.

An Eloquent Divine.

Rev. J. B. Tuttle, of Muncie, Ind., who has occupied the pulpit at the First Baptist church for the past two Sundays, has created a very favorable impression on all who were so fortunate as to hear him. A Pleasant Affair.

The friends of R. W. Chapman did not forget him, and a few less than a hundred met last evening, and gave him and his bride a genuine old-fashioned serenade, using any old kind of an instrument that would make a noise. Chapman was equal to the occasion, and gave them a reception long to be remembered. The doors of his residence were thrown open and everybody made welcome. A good, social time was had, refreshments were served, and a fresh jar of cool ice water tapped. That Mr. and Mrs. Chapman may live to enjoy a long and happy life was the wish of all.

The Advantages of Child Culture.

The study of child culture is one that is daily eliciting more thought and consideration from the brightest minds in our educational circles. The little child so long quiescent is forcing himself upon us now and new problems in his existence are constantly before us for solution. When we appreciate what a vast amount of knowledge the little child absorbs in the first six years of his life, what a basis these years are for after life and how their influence can never be wholly eradicated, we realize then the importance of the work that can be accomplished in these earlier years in starting the child right.

To the average man whose home provides for his children a safe, comfortable shelter with good surroundings and the culture of home influences the problem is easier to solve.

But to the child born in the midst of bad surroundings with often an undesirable inheritance, with parents whose time is too full of daily cares to see that the child does any thing but exist the age between three and six is a sore trial. According to the laws of growth the child must learn. How shall he be surrounded by influences that will later make him a citizen of whom we may be proud?

To these children the free kindergarten comes as the needed aid: who that has ever seen for fifty to a hundred children in a free kindergarten daily can fail to appreciate the benefit not only they themselves are deriving but the unconscious reflection of the work on their homes and their future lives.

The city of Portsmouth seems to offer a broad field for this humane and philanthropic work. The interest seems deep and there is hope that this interest may become material assistance when that is necessary. Other cities are carrying on this work and enlarging it daily. Its influence is not a debated question but an acknowledged fact for "If the child is what he should be as a child he will become what he should as a boy, just as naturally as new shoots spring from the healthy plant." **

The Clever Landlady.

"You've got a very nice looking landlady," said Bilkins to his friend Jilkins, who lived in diggings, "but she looks a sharper," he added in a whisper. "Yes, you are right," replied Bilkins, with the smile of a man who had long ago discovered the fact. "It wants some one enter than me to get over that woman."

"You don't say so."

"Yes, when I first came here a strong suspicion grew on me that the landlady helped herself rather freely to the victuals which I brought in for my own consumption. I would stop her little game, I thought. So accordingly one day I brought home a chop and a pound of new potatoes. Having counted them and finding that there were ten in all, I handed them over to be cooked. When the meal was ready and the covers had been removed, I strained my neck to see the result of my little ruse, when—" "You found nearly half of them gone, I suppose?"

"No, nothing of the sort. They were washed."—Pearson's Weekly.

The Honorable Charles Micawber Grosvenor says there was nothing wrong about Dick's check, except being caught.

Colonel Conger's letter opened Hanna's campaign with a loud report that made the blood curdle in your Uncle Marcus' heart.

There are 19,000 starving and needy miners and families in Ohio, according to the report of Bushnell's mine inspectors. This is prosperity.

The Dingley law falls off a few hundred thousands daily in receipts as compared with expenditures. As a revenue raiser it is a howling farce.

Hanna's paid agents are anxious to plant "corn-cutters" in the back townships of all the close counties.

Governor Bushnell, George B. Cox, and Mark Hanna have made an alliance offensive and beneficial to throw down Foraker, Kurtz & Co.

Progressive Democrats joined the Republican party and saved the Union. Honest Republicans should join the Democratic party and save the republic.

Let the honest people of all parties in Ohio organize vigilant committees to punish any scoundrel of whatever party who attempts fraud upon the right of the franchise.

Poor old John Sherman is to be dragged into the Ohio campaign at Mark Hanna's beck and call. Old age, dotage, graveyards, starvation, strikes, are Hanna's brightest jewels.

Hanna's paid agents are preparing to rape the ballot box in the most unexpected places. The attempts will be made wherever the people are the most honest and unsuspecting. Citizens, be on your guard.

There are many workmen in Akron, says The Times-Democrat, who are echoing the remarks of Andrew McBride of Youngstown, vice president of the sixth district Amalgamated iron, steel and tin workers, when he said, "The Republican party is directly responsible for all our trouble. This is a hard thing for me to say, as I have always been a Republican, but it is true just the same. Previous to the last election the Republican party made promises without compunction; in fact they lied to us. They told us the mills had plenty of orders on hand, conditioned on the election of McKinley. If he was elected they said the mills would start up right away and keep running. They told us what was not true. If it had not been for their false and alluring promises, I can tell you the goldbugs would not have been successful."

"VERY RAW."

A California Comment on the Methods of Hanna.

Mr. William H. Mills, a prominent citizen of California, writing to a friend in this city, makes the following pointed comments:

"I have no objection to Mr. Hanna as a man, a monopolist, a millionaire, a promoter of trusts; but through the triumph of men like Hanna the common life of the country, the great broad democracy upon which the nation and its institutions rest sinks to the floor. Hanna was the pioneer of the bosses who got control of a national convention by getting control of a national committee, selecting delegations favorable to his candidate and seating them by the exercise of an arbitrary power and stepping into the senate, after his choice for president had been elected, in a position to direct the course of the administration. All this is what we call raw work in California. It is exceedingly raw. Hanna was the arm of the monopolists, of the trusts, of the vast combinations of capital, which will eventually eliminate entirely all exercise of proprietorship on the part of those who work with their hands, until all men who work will be reduced to the condition of day laborers. Hanna is the embodiment of a force which will eventually abolish all distinction between the wage-earner and the slave. If the thing Hanna stands for is triumphant it becomes more broadly aggressive with each triumph. It is emboldened by every victory and it is the necessity of its nature that it must make some progress. Monopoly must become greater monopoly, for the instant it ceases to expand it begins to contract, because by the expansion and growth of industrial activities around it it ceases to be omnipotent. If the Hannas of all times and all ages had their way the liberties of mankind would not be of their choosing, because government would cease to proceed from the consent of the governed. It exists in the United States now only by the consent of the trusts."

Biliousness

Is caused by torpid liver, which prevents digestion and permits food to ferment and putrify in the stomach. Then follow dizziness, headache,

Hood's Pills

Insomnia, nervousness, and, if not relieved, bilious fever or blood poisoning. Hood's Pills stimulate the stomach, rouse the liver, cure headache, dizziness, constipation, etc. 25 cents. Sold by all druggists. The only pills to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Horace L. Chapman is getting around over the state, meeting the people in a good old-fashioned, Democratic way. His illustrious competitor, Governor Bushnell, is lying awake nights wondering what Hanna is going to do to him next.

The innocent little increase of one-sixteenth of a cent a pound in the wholesale price of sugar means that the sugar trust will be able to increase its annual dividends about seven per cent., and there is nothing to prevent the trust from increasing it at pleasure.

Judge Farrell, of Carroll, when nominated for senator by the Democrats in the Stark-Carroll district, said in his speech of acceptance: "Much has been said regarding the election by the legislature of the United States senator and I desire to take this opportunity to say to you that I am not nor will I be during the campaign under any promises of pledge to support any man for this position, so that I may be free and untrammelled to go into caucus and there support the best man that may be offered."

Hanna's subsidized press announces: "The Republican national committee has concluded to take no chances of not securing control of the United States senate. It will enter actively into the campaign in every state holding elections for the legislature this fall." This is notice to the honest people of Ohio that all the trusts, corporations and combinations, bull-dozed and milked by Hanna, will put up for the corruption fund of the most brazen and brutal political boss in American politics. It remains to be seen whether the honest and patriotic people of Ohio are for sale.

Says the New York Post (Rep.): "Mr. Dingley's cry for haste with the tariff, on the ground that every day's delay meant a loss to the treasury of $100,000, sounds hollow in the face of actual returns. In New York the receipts for the Dingley's first day were $127,000, as against $361,000 from Wilson's last day, a clear loss of more than $200,000, caused by the advent of Dingley. Taking the figures for the country as a whole, the comparison is still more instructive. The deficit up to date is $25,000,000, and would be much larger but for the extraordinary receipts under the Wilson bill. When the unaided Dingley bill gets to work we shall have some magnificent monthly deficits to carry the fall elections with."

August 1, 1896, in the midst of the presidential election, there were in blast in the United States 169 blast furnaces with a weekly capacity of 191,185 tons. On the first day of August, 1897, there were 148 blast furnaces in blast, with a weekly capacity of 167,261 tons. Nineteen less furnaces and 23,924 tons less of pig iron per week. Still we are positively assured that there is a great boom in business. This, too, in the face of the fact that for 12 months ending July 1, 1896, we imported 355,384 tons of foreign pig iron, while in the year ending July 1, 1897, we imported but 193,506 tons. There can be no permanent prosperity in all sections and business until silver has been restored and we have more sound money and plenty of it.

AFTER TODAY

The Times Will Be Issued From Its Elegant New Home

Corner of Front and Chillicothe Streets—Last Call for Copy in the Old Quarters. The New Times Will Greet You Tomorrow Evening as Usual—It Leads 'Em All.

The Times comes to its readers a little early to-day. This is done in order that our press may be torn down and moved into the Times' new building at the corner of Front and Chillicothe streets. For weeks the Times has been moving into its elegant new home. The job department is now safely housed and the word has been passed along for the newspaper plant to follow.

It is a giant task, the moving out of presses, type cases and tons of paraphernalia that go to make up a first class daily newspaper equipment, between issues. But the Times is equal to the emergency. We hope to be out tomorrow evening on schedule time. Every effort possible and within the power of man will be made not to disappoint its readers.

Should some unforeseen delay or accident overtake us, we beg the kind indulgence of our patrons. We hope they will bear kindly with us for a few days until we are more permanently settled in our new quarters, the most elegant newspaper home in all Southern Ohio. A little later the Times will invite all its friends in to inspect the model job printing and newspaper establishment of the state.

In the meantime disturb us not. We have many troubles of our own.

YOU CANNOT CURE PILES.

By Internal Remedies.

The only sure way to cure every form of piles is to use a remedy like the Pyramid Pile cure which is applied directly to the parts affected and its wonderful healing effects are apparent from the first application because the medicinal properties are rapidly absorbed by tissues and sensitive membranes of the rectum, and the cure is made speedily and almost before the patient is aware of it, every trace of piles has left him.

This is one of the reasons why the Pyramid Pile cure has been so uniformly successful. It is applied directly where it is needed and where it will do the most good. Not by the roundabout way of the stomach nor by the harsh, barbarous methods of various surgical operations and so called systems.

Direct application to the seat of disease is the only rational way, and this is fully accomplished by the Pyramid Pile cure.

If the voluntary testimony of thousands who have tried this remedy is worth anything then no sufferer has any excuse for longer delaying in giving it a fair trial, knowing that when you do so the Pyramid Pile cure will have made one more friend, the best possible advertisement we can have. The chief advantages of the remedy are: It cures without pain, the cure is lasting, it contains no poison, and lastly, it is the cheapest and quickest cure yet found. Your druggist can tell you what it has done for others. Sold by druggists at 50 cents and $1 per package.

Orator O'Rourke's Kick.

Jim O'Rourke, the famous "orator," when in the League as a member of the New York baseball team, never had the reputation of being a kicker, but upon one occasion he made a protest that will always be remembered by players who were on the team with him. In a game which was umpired by Phil Powers Jim hit a ball over the fence. It was foul by about a foot, but Jim, thinking it was a home run, began to tear around the bases like a runaway horse. When he reached the plate in a breathless state, yet wearing a look of triumph on his classic countenance, O'Rourke learned to his discomfort that the umpire had called the ball a foul.

"Why, Philly," exclaimed Jim in the midst of tones, "that wasn't a foul!"

"Yes, Jimmy, I'm sorry to say it was," said Powers, with assurance.

"Why, Phil," remarked Jim rather seriously, "it was five feet fair."

"Oh, no, it wasn't, Jim. It was a dead foul," explained the umpire.

"Why, Mr. Powers!" protested the orator, growing slightly warm under the collar, "I am conversant with the conglomeration of facts in this case, and as my optical eyesight is of extreme excellence I am positive of your misinformation."

This was a staggerer for Powers, but he struggled gamely with this reply:

"Mr. O'Rourke, you're not entitled to a home run. You must bat over again."

"See here, Powers," ejaculated the now thoroughly excited player, "I'll not allow you to rob me in this matter."

"See here, O'Rourke," retorted Powers, "if you give me any more talk I'll have to fine you."

Then O'Rourke found solace in a burst of eloquence which sounded something like this:

"Why, you miserable, groveling, sycophantic, phosphorescent, unconstituted viper, I've half a mind to excommunicate, extradite, separate, elucitate, prevaricate and eject you from this beautiful ball ground and this eccentric National League."

Powers was by this time tempted to reverse his decision, but O'Rourke, who was too quick for him, went out on a fly ball.—New York Sun.

Largest Yoke of Cattle.

Joe and Jerry are the names of the largest yoke of cattle ever seen in America. They are the property of J. D. Avery of Buckland, Mass., and they are 8 years old and measure 10 feet in girth. They are 17 hands high, and from tip to tip their measurement is 16 feet 11 inches. The two together weigh 7,300 pounds. They are beautifully colored, are models of symmetry, and are extremely docile and gentle. They have been exhibited at all the large agricultural fairs in the country. They are black and white, like all pure Holsteins. The yoke they wear is said to be the largest ever made, and is 7 feet long and weighs 200 pounds. They walk a mile in 30 minutes. Their horns are magnificent and are highly polished. Their owner has the oxen groomed every day, and their coats shine like satin. On a level they have pulled 11,061 pounds of stone loaded on a drag, moving it 8 feet in one draw. This is a world record pull. They are fed from 8 to 12 quarts of corn and oats ground together, 2 quarts of flax meal and from 6 to 8 quarts of bran every day.—New York Tribune.

Homeless Kate, the Box Car.

"Jack my drivers, but it's Homeless Kate! Why, Kate, ain't there no gettin' you back to your friends? There's 40 chasers out for you from your road if there's one. Who's holdin' you now?"

"Wish I knew," said Homeless Kate. "I belong in Topeka, but I've bin to Cedar Rapids; I've bin to Winnipeg; I've bin to Newport News; I've bin all down the old Atlanta and West Point, an I've bin to Buffalo. Maybe I'll fetch up at Haverstraw. I've only bin out ten months, but I'm homesick. I'm just achin' home."

"Try Chicago, Katie," said the switching loco, and the battered old car lumbered down the track, jolting, "I want to be in Kansas when the sunflowers bloom."

"Yard's full o' Homeless Kates an Wanderin' Willies," he explained to 007. "I knew an old Pittsburgh flatcar out 17 months, an one of ours was gone 15 'fore ever we got track of her. Dunno quite how our men fix it. Swap around, I guess."—Rudyard Kipling in Scribner's.

Gold In Barnato's Body.

A German paper is responsible for the announcement that Barney Barnato, still more than the legendary king of Peru, who was wont to have his body gilded afresh every morning, deserved the title of El Dorado—the "Man of Gold"—not because of his wealth or of his connection with gold mines, but because his system actually secreted gold. He was, says this credible authority, the victim of a disease called metallitis, his blood being permeated with a powdery gold, as were his eyes, nose, ears and all of his mucous membrane. The pain caused by this condition was so intolerable that it is believed to have been the cause of his suicide.

The Shocked Samaritan.

The man who knew a little of everything looked at the passenger in the seat ahead of him and finally leaned forward.

"Excuse me," he said, "but you really ought to shake off the cares of business and go somewhere for complete rest and quiet."

"You mind your own affairs," said the other man gruffly.

The sympathetic passenger looked hurt.

"Of course," he said, "your case is nothing to me. I only proffered the advice in a spirit of friendliness. At the same time anybody can see at a glance that you are suffering from too close confinement."

"There, now, let up on that," said the gruff man. "I don't want any more of your chaff."

"What's the money to a man in your condition?" said the sympathetic passenger without heeding the rebuke.

"Mighty little," growled the gruff passenger.

"You'll never pardon yourself for this neglect," said the sympathetic passenger.

"I wish I could," said the gruff man.

"What you need is to get out and drink in the free air of nature," said the sympathetic passenger.

"You bet it is," chuckled the gruff man.

His chuckle turned to a laugh that shook him so thoroughly that something tinkled at his wrists. He held up his arms, and lo! he was handcuffed. Turning to the horrified passenger, he hoarsely whispered:

"Ten years in the pen, ha, ha, ha!"

And the sympathetic philanthropist sank back in his seat dumb with horror.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Wide Open.

"That man can get anything he wants in here without money," said the waiter as a little man left the cafe carrying a box of cigars.

"How's that—an old friend?"

"No. It was this way: The boss had been running this joint a long time, and he didn't know what the trouble was; first class location and everything bang up, but people would pass us by, and we couldn't pull 'em in. One day this little fellow comes along and asks how business is. The boss tells him the truth. 'It's on the bum,' says he. 'Do you know why?' asks the man. 'No,' says the boss. 'I'll tell you,' says the man, and he shows the boss how the door is too narrow, and how you have to turn a corner to get in, and how there is a big sign and a railing in the way, and the cashier's desk blocks the window and you can't see the tables from the walk. Well, the boss spends a lot of money and fixes everything different, makes a wide door, as you see, and puts the tables so you can look at the clean linen from the walk, and you wouldn't believe it, but the people just flocked in in droves and we've been on Easy street ever since. New York people like a wide open game, and they won't go against anything dark."—New York Telegram.

A Novel Way to Catch Eels.

An interesting story concerning the faculty for association of ideas in fishes comes from the West Indies. On one of the islands an old man was in the habit of assembling great numbers of eels near the surface of the water by the simple device of striking one pebble upon another, thus producing a short, sharp sound. On account of this faculty he was for a long time believed by the other natives to be a sorcerer, a reputation which he probably liked to have, for he made no effort to avoid it, and it was by accident that it was discovered that the clinking of the pebbles was always succeeded by the throwing of bread and scraps of other food upon the water. The eels had become accustomed to connecting the two incidents, and never failed to appear in the certainty of receiving food, when they heard the sound of the pebbles.

Unfortunately for the confidence of the eels in human nature, as soon as the natives discovered the old man's tricks they imitated it to their own benefit and captured the eels as fast as they appeared.—New York Commercial.

William Lloyd Garrison.

William Lloyd Garrison, a son of the famous abolitionist, said of his father in a recent lecture in Boston: "At home Mr. Garrison was cheerful. His sense of the ludicrous was very marked. He was passionately fond of music and had a habit of singing through the house. Babies were a delight to him and would be good with him when the mother could not soothe them. He was very fond of puns. When the servant failed, he helped in the kitchen. When there was sickness, he was a wonderful nurse. At table he made the conversation general and drew out the most timid."

Apples and Sleep.

A French writer has been collecting medical opinions about apples. An American doctor says that apples contain more phosphorus than any other fruit or indeed any kind of vegetable and advises the eating of an apple before going to bed at night. Apples, says a well known French doctor, induce a more quiet sleep than chloral or opium.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

Odell Williams in "The Alderman" at the Grand next Monday night.

The Gorman's, under the management of Charles F. Brown are touring the country in their new piece "Mr. Bean From Boston."

The specialties introduced in the "Alderman" are a big feature and one that is sure to please. Don't fail to see them at the Grand on next Monday evening.

Charles Brown, who was the leading comedian with Yale's "Twelve Temptations" last season has been transferred to Yale's "Devil's Auction" which is an early November attraction at the Grand.

A sure winner.—Odell Williams for Alderman.

Mark Wiggins is looking after the lithographing at the Grand.

Portsmouth theatre goes may not know of Odell Williams, but they certainly know the plays he has been identified with in which he took the leading comedy roles. Every theatre-goer in this city is familiar with his two biggest successes "Alabama" and "Pun'head Wilson," while there are many other well known plays, in which he assumed prominent comedy roles.

"Other People's Money," a comedy of the funniest kind, in which Mr. Hennessy LeRoy made a big hit last season, will be one of next week's attractions at the Grand.

All the latest songs and up-to-date dances will be introduced by Odell Williams and his merry company at the Grand next Monday night.

Wm. Collier in "The Man From Mexico," is one of the banner attractions booked for the grand.

"The Alderman," like all of Wm. Gill's plays, is a farce with a little plot, put together for the purpose of making the public laugh and to afford the members of the company a chance to introduce their different specialties.

Judging from the roster in last week's Mirror, Al. G. Field has, beyond a doubt, the largest and best minstrel organization on the road this season.

Herron is a very pleasant gentleman and is fast making friends with the people of the city.

The Bad Girl's Joke.

This was the joke of the bad girl of the school. She was likewise considered the brightest, but the combination of the two qualities did not keep her always on the best of terms with the unfortunate man whose duty it was to direct her young mind in the paths of learning. It was on one of those special occasions when she and the learned instructor had had a difference of opinion. As to who was to blame there were two different views. The one favorable to the pupil was held by the young woman. The instructor did not divulge his view of matters. But the wickedest girl in the school was bound to be revenged. She set her wits at work, and, going into the schoolroom where the school was assembled one morning, the instructor discovered a drawing, more or less artistic, which represented the familiar scene of St. Peter at the gate of paradise.

Before the reverend saint stood a solitary man whose features bore an unmistakable resemblance to those of the instructor himself. From the saint's mouth proceeded these words, written in irreverent school girl fashion: "No, Johnny"—the instructor's name was John—"I can't let you in. All your scholars are here, but there is no chance for you." There was a moment of suspense while the twitching lips of the subject showed an effort at self control, but it was useless, and, with the whole school joining in a loud chorus, he broke into a hearty laugh. "No," he said when at last there was a pause, "I should not care to go in. If all my pupils are there, I should prefer to keep away. I have too much of them here."—New York Times.

Realism.

"That installment of your new story was very interesting," said the editor of the story page, "but there was one thing about your manuscript that I failed to understand. I thought for a minute that you were forgetting how to spell."

"If there is anything I pride myself on, it is being a good speller. I have often wished that I had put in the time I spent in acquiring the art of spelling words of six syllables in learning to calculate compound interest."

"I know that. Your reliability in that respect made the sentence that I refer to all the more mysterious."

"Maybe it was a slip of the type-writer."

"Possibly. It would have looked absurd if I had not happened to catch it. At the bottom of the last page, instead of writing, 'To be continued in our next,' as is customary, you put, 'To be continued in our necks.'"

"And you changed it?"

"Of course."

"I'm sorry you did. I wanted this story to be something particularly realistic. I wrote it 'in our necks' because that's where we writers of this style of fiction invariably get it from both the publishers and the critics."—Detroit Free Press.

Pieces and Wholes.

Proprietors of stores where musical instruments are sold say that many people seem quite unable to discriminate between such establishments and those in which printed music is dealt in.

As an instance it is related that a young man came into a piano store and asked:

"Do you sell piano pieces here?"

"No," answered the salesman, "nothing but pianos whole."

The intending purchaser opened his eyes in a wide and puzzled way and went out apparently wondering whether the salesman thought he wanted a fragment of a piano.—Youth's Companion.

Guinea Pig Farming.

England has three guinea pig farmers, one of whom exports 150,000 yearly to France, where they are used at restaurants as rabbits, the flavor of the flesh being identical in the two animals. The industry is said to be very profitable.

We will open our fall campaign next week. Watch for announcement.

THE MAN WHO DID NOT BELIEVE IN LUCK

[Copyright, 1891, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

He got in at Ipswich with seven different weekly papers under his arm. I noticed that each one insured its reader against death or injury by railway accident. He arranged his luggage upon the rack above him, took off his hat and laid it on the seat beside him, mopped his bald head with a red silk handkerchief and then set to work steadily to write his name and address upon each of the seven papers. I sat opposite to him and read Punch. I always take the old humor when traveling. I find it soothing to the nerves.

Passing over the points at Manningtree the train gave a lurch, and a horseshoe he had carefully placed in the rack slipped through the netting and fell with a musical ring upon his head.

He appeared neither surprised nor angry. Having stanchied the wound with his handkerchief he stooped and picked it up, glanced at it with, as I thought, an expression of reproach and dropped it gently out of the window.

"Did it hurt you?" I asked.

"It was a foolish question, I told myself the moment I had uttered it. The thing must have weighed three pounds at the least; it was an exceptionally large and heavy shoe. The bump on his head was swelling visibly before my eyes. Anyone but an idiot must have seen that he was hurt. I expected an irritable reply. I should have given one myself had I been in his place. Instead, however, he seemed to regard the inquiry as a natural and kindly expression of sympathy.

"It did, a little," he replied.

"What were you doing with it?" I asked. It was an odd sort of thing for a man to be traveling with.

"It was lying in the roadway just outside the station," he explained; "I picked it up for luck."

He refolded his handkerchief so as to bring a cooler surface in contact with the swelling, while I murmured something genial about the insensibility of Providence.

"Yes," he said; "I've had a deal of luck in my time, but it's never turned out well."

"I was born on a Wednesday," he continued; "which, as I daresay you know, is the luckiest day a man can be born on. My mother was a widow, and none of my relatives would do anything for me. They said it would be like taking coals to Newcastle helping a boy born on a Wednesday; and my uncle, when he died, left every penny of his money to my brother Sam, as a slight compensation to him for having been born on a Friday. All I ever got was advice upon the duties and responsibilities of wealth, when it arrived, and entreaties that I would not neglect those with claims upon me when I came to be a rich man."

He paused while folding up his various insurance papers and placing them in the inside breast-pocket of his coat.

"Then there are black cats," he went on; "they're said to be lucky. Why, there never was a blacker cat than the one that followed me into my rooms in Bolsover street the very first night I took them."

"Didn't he bring you luck?" I inquired, finding that he had stopped.

A far-away look came into his sad eyes.

"Well, of course it all depends," he answered, dreamily, "maybe we'd never have suited one another; you can always look at it that way. Still, I'd like to have tried."

He sat staring out of the window, and for awhile I did not care to intrude upon his evidently painful memories.

"What happened then?" I asked however, at last.

He roused himself from his reverie. "Oh," he said, "nothing extraordinary. She had to leave London for a time and gave me her pet canary to take charge of while she was away."

"But it wasn't your fault," I urged.

"No, perhaps not," he agreed; "but it created a coldness which others were not slow to take advantage of."

"I offered her the cat, too," he added, but more to himself than to me.

We sat and smoked in silence. I felt that the consolations of a stranger would sound weak.

"Piebald horses are lucky, too," he observed, knocking the ashes from his pipe against the window sash. "I had one of them once."

"What did it do to you?" I inquired.

"Lost me the best crib I ever had in my life," was the simple rejoinder.

"The governor stood it a good deal longer than I had any right to expect; but you can't keep a man who is always drunk. It gives a firm a bad name."

"It would," I agreed.

"You see," he went on, "I never had the head for it. To some men it would not have so much mattered; but the very first glass was enough to upset me. I'd never been used to it."

"But why did you take it?" I persisted. "The horse didn't make you drink it, did he?"

"Well, it was this way," he explained, continuing to rub gently the lump which was now about the size of an egg; "the animal had belonged to a gentleman who traveled in the wine and spirit line, and who had been accustomed to visit in the way of business almost every public house he came to. The result was you couldn't get that little horse past a public-house—at least I couldn't. He sighted them a quarter of a mile off, and made straight for the door. I struggled with him at first, but it was five to ten minutes' work getting him away, and folks used to gather round and bet on us. I think, maybe, I'd have stuck to it, however, if it hadn't been for a temperance chap who stopped one day and lectured the crowd about it from the opposite side of the street. He called me Pilgrim, and said the little horse was Rollin, or some such name, and kept on shouting out that I was to fight him for a heavenly crown. After that they called us 'Rollin and the Pilgrim,' fighting for the crown." It riled me, that did, and at the very next house at which he pulled up, I got down and said I'd come for two of Scotch. That was the beginning. It took me years to break myself of the habit."

"But there," he continued, "it has always been the same. I hadn't been a fortnight in my first situation before my employer gave me a goose weighing eighteen pounds, as a Christmas present."

"Well, that couldn't have done you any harm," I remarked. "That was lucky enough."

"So the other clerks said at the time," he replied; "the old gentleman had never been known to give anything away before in his life. He's taken a fancy to you," they said; "you are a lucky beggar!"

He sighed heavily. I felt there was a story attached.

"What did you do with it?" I asked.

"That was the trouble," he returned; "I did not know what to do with it. It was ten o'clock on Christmas eve, just as I was leaving, that he gave it to me. Tiddling Brothers have sent me a goose, Boggles," he said to me, as I helped him on with his great coat. "Very kind of 'em, but I don't want it myself; you can have it."

"Of course I thanked him, and was very grateful. He wished me a merry Xmas and went out. I tied the thing up in brown paper, and took it under my arm. It was a fine bird, but heavy."

"Under all the circumstances, and it being Xmas time, I thought I would treat myself to a glass of beer. I went into a quiet little house at the corner of the Lane and laid the goose on the counter."

"That's a big 'un," said the landlord; "you'll get a good cut off him tomorrow."

"His words set me thinking, and for the first time it struck me that I didn't want the bird—that it was no use to me at all. I was going down to spend the Xmas with my young lady's people in Kent."

"Was this the canary young lady?" I interrupted.

"No," he replied; "this was before that one. It was this goose I'm telling you of that upset this one. Well, her folks were big farmers; it would have been absurd taking a goose down to them, and I knew no one in London to give it to, so when the landlord came round again I asked him if he would care to buy it. I told him he could have it cheap."

"I don't want it myself," he answered, "I've got three in the house already. Perhaps one of these gentlemen would like to make an offer."

"He turned to a couple of chaps who were sitting drinking gin. They didn't look to me worth the price of a chicken between them. The seediest said he'd like to look at it, however; and I undid the parcel. He mauled the thing pretty considerably, and even examined me as to how I came by it, ending by upsetting half a tumbler of gin and water over it. Then he offered me half a crown. It made me so angry that I took the brown paper and the string in one hand and the goose in the other and walked straight out without saying a word."

An Athletic Governor.

The new governor of British Guiana, Sir Augustus Hemming, who is about to pass through the United States en route to Georgetown, is especially celebrated in England as a cricketer, being renowned as one of the oldest and most successful of amateur players, a rival, indeed, of Hon. Alfred Lyttleton. He is one of the founders of the Sports' club in London, and has only just resigned the presidency of its committee in consequence of his departure from England. His principal associate in the founding of this renowned institution was the late Sir John Astley, popularly known as "The Mate." Sir Augustus is likewise an expert knight of the wheel, and, in spite of his mature years, remains to-day what he was 20 years ago—a typical, clean-built athlete.—N. Y. Times.

PRICE OF WHEAT

Did Not Rise Because of Any Legislation.

Hon. Richard P. Bland Places the Credit Where It Belongs and Predicts That Calamity Will Follow.

Lebanon, Mo., Aug. 23, 1897.

"It cannot be contended that the great rise in the price of wheat and consequent promise of prosperity to the farmer is in consequence of the passage of the Dingley bill or any other law incident to the McKinley administration. The rise in the price of wheat has been phenomenal, it is true, but it began in London and Europe before it began here. It will hardly be asserted that the Dingley bill or anything else relating to the present administration caused the rise in the price of grain in Liverpool or European markets. This is not even claimed. It was not expected that the Dingley bill would raise the price of wheat or farm products in any country.

"Yet the fact that wheat and other farm products, and especially food products, are higher in Europe and in other countries now than they were before the election of Mr. McKinley, or before his inauguration and before the passage of the present tariff bill, is proof positive that the rise in prices has been occasioned by things occurring outside of the United States and not within it. The failure of the wheat crop in the principal countries of the world that come into competition with the United States, as is well known, is the sole cause of the rise in the price of wheat. The fact that other wheat producing countries, and especially India, have suffered a failure in the wheat crop, has occasioned the present rise in the price of food products in this country, to the extent at least that India and other wheat producing countries have heretofore competed with our farmers in the markets of the world.

"It is to be hoped, and no doubt will be true, that this present rise in the price of wheat will add many millions—probably more than a hundred millions—to the income of the American farmers for this season. This will be a great boon to them and the whole country, and we are all very glad, so far as our own people are concerned, that such are the special conditions under which the American agriculturists are now situated.

"It will also, to some extent, at least, insure to the benefit of the Federal treasury, and incidentally, probably, to the advantage of the present administration. No doubt our present good yield of wheat and other food products will cause an influx of gold to this country, or so regulate and govern the exchanges abroad as to prevent any gold shipments from here for many months to come. This in itself will strengthen the Federal treasury, or at least prevent the withdrawal of gold from it, and give a steadiness to the money market that perhaps otherwise would not have occurred.

"But, after all, are good prices, or high prices, a good thing? The gold advocates have heretofore contended that low prices were not in themselves a bad thing. They have insisted that for the past 20 years or more prices on commodities everywhere on an average have gone steadily down, whereas, on the other hand, wages for labor have gone steadily up. They have attributed this to the operation of the single gold standard and have heretofore claimed that such a condition is the best for mankind, and that low prices inure to the benefit of the masses.

"On the other hand, the advocates of the free coinage of silver have insisted that low prices, or falling prices, means stagnation of business, failure of enterprises and the throwing of labor out of employment; that low prices ultimately mean the oppression of the debtors, because low prices mean high money, dear money. For speaking of prices and money relatively, when prices on commodities on an average are low and falling, it necessarily means that it takes less money from day to day to purchase commodities; that is to say, that money as compared to commodities is constantly rising in value, while commodities are constantly falling.

"Now, however, the gold advocates seize upon the fact that there is a rise in prices, and especially in the prices of our farm products, and allude to it as an indication of returning prosperity and attribute it to the elections of last fall, the victory that McKinley won over Bryan and the passage of the protective tariff bill. They now insist that a rise in prices is a good thing, so that the argument is now upon our side and the admission of our opponents we cite against them.

"We contend that the rise in prices is exceptional, that it has been caused by nature, brought about by causes over which the legislature or the administration has no power; that, therefore, neither the gold standard, the election of McKinley nor the passage of the tariff bill has anything to do with affecting favorably the rise in prices or the price of anything except those prices that are artificially increased in value by the protective tariff. This artificial increase will last as long, probably, as the law increasing them remains upon the statute book, but the rise in the prices of farm products will remain only so long as the exceptional conditions exist; that is to say, so long as there are failures of crops elsewhere and we have fair crops in our country.

"On the other hand, the election of Mr. Bryan and the restoration of the free coinage of silver would have increased the prices, not only of farm products, but of all other property; would have given employment to labor at better wages, and thus a revival of business and better times would have been made permanent by the reformation of our monetary system, and not depend upon the mere whim, so to speak, of 'natural causes'—that is to say, the failure of crops in other countries. Another contention that we insisted on is now admitted by our opponents, that the prosperity of the farmer, the agriculturist, is the foundation of the prosperity of all other people in this country. We have insisted that the demonetizing of silver caused a fall in the price of products generally, but particularly the fall in the price of wheat and of all other farm products that come in competition with the farm products of silver-using countries abroad. The reasons for this are so well understood that I will not undertake to enumerate them, my design only being to call attention to the fact that we insist that prosperity must come first to the agricultural people of this country before it will be felt perceptibly elsewhere. The present condition proves this contention of ours.

"We insist also that good prices are a good thing—a good thing for the country and all of its people. This is now practically admitted.

"The only question remaining then is, 'Can we depend upon the present causes and conditions that exist throughout the world to maintain good prices, especially in this country?'

"The answer to that is that we cannot expect that nature will always favor us by shortening the crops of other people for our especial benefit; that there can be nothing permanent in the prosperity that is now supposed to exist; whereas, on the other hand, the prosperity that would result from the restoration of free coinage of silver would be the increase of prices in this country and the world over and the betterment of mankind generally and this better condition would be permanent, not accidental or exceptional. Wait and see the result. How long will this stimulated condition in the price of farm products and apparent prosperity coming to this country exist? It is too early yet to predict on this subject, except in so far as I have already stated—that when present conditions are reversed calamity will come.

"Before the gold standard advocate boasts upon these causes or his theories of prosperity, as indicated by present conditions, let him wait. Let him wait to see whether all the people are employed at fair wages. At the present time such is not the case. Indeed, strikes are the rule—unemployed labor exists by the millions. So that this prosperity cannot be said to be universal in our country. With labor, on the other hand, out of employment, as now exists in this country, especially in our large cities, wait and see next winter how much money they will have to purchase the necessities of life that will cost them so much more, owing to exceptional conditions above mentioned and the Dingley bill.

"If there is not universal employment of labor and good wages we will find much suffering among a certain class of our people instead of prosperity. So the time has not come to say what will be the effect of present conditions, 'higher prices and prosperity,' upon the cause of the restoration of silver. It is too early to predict anything in that respect with any degree of certainty.

"We only know that the arguments we made heretofore are now admitted as good by our opponents.

"We hope for the best for our country and for the world, and would be glad to see prosperity everywhere, but so far as the cause is concerned, our argument is now admitted by our opponents, and unless there should universally exist prosperity in this country during the rest of Mr. McKinley's administration, not only will the argument be upon our side, but the votes also in the approaching elections of 1898 and 1899. R. P. BLAND."

Under the heading, "The Science of Politics," the Ohio State Journal says: "In other words, Senator Hanna is still at the helm." When the wrath of the honest people of Ohio strikes Hanna's main sail and the jib boom takes Mark in the jaw, it will knock him off the poop deck and that helm will have a rest.

Has anyone heard of a single instance in which the wage-worker's wages have been raised to keep pace with the rise in the price of bread?

Hanna's general order, No. 1: To Major Charles Jackass Dick: Pay spot cash. No more checks. Your uncle, MARCUS.

Hanna would not let McKinley receive a reception at Cleveland until he had taken his president up the back way and told him what he might say during his stay in Ohio.

Governor Bushnell is still at "The Rocks." He was not at Columbus to weep on McKinley's neck or show him the glories of Axline's neatly painted "Doom" in the state house.

Senator William E. Chandler, Republican, from New Hampshire, says the Republican party pledge made at St. Louis for the freedom of Cuba, "is proceeding with agonizing slowness."

There are more starving, idle men in General C. H. Grosvenor's district than in any other district in the state and he is yelling "prosperity" and talking about the beauties of the Dingley bill.

WHAT has been your experience? That the "just-as-good," "sold-for-less-money" kinds are the most expensive? That the best, or standard, in all lines is the cheapest? The best in paints is Pure White Lead and Linseed Oil. (See list of the genuine brands.)

Lifted Back to Health.

RIPANS TABULES help people back to health. They are not so very wonderful when you come to think of it. They simply supply the things that nature needs—the ingredients lacking in the food. Digestive troubles come because food is improperly selected, poorly cooked, or hastily eaten. Most digestive troubles mean acidity or sourness in the stomach; constipation of the bowels; and sluggishness of the liver. These are the things that RIPANS TABULES correct. They are serious things if you let them run on. They are miserably uncomfortable things always. Most all the ills suffered are traceable to some form of indigestion. It is safe to say that if people would keep their digestive organs active and healthy, nobody would ever be very sick.

RIPANS TABULES are made of the things most often prescribed by physicians for dyspepsia, indigestion, sour stomach, bilious headache, constipation and all other disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels. They make the appetite better, digestion easier and more thorough, bring clearness to the head and new vigor to the body.

A Klondike Gold Field

Where? Right on your own premises. Plant five varieties of Japan Plums that I will name, two kinds of Quinces, four of Peaches, and three varieties of those great seedling Peaches that are as hardy as apples and just as large. Plant this fall and your mine will open in full blast in the summer of 1899! Every tree will be a gold mine and increase in riches as years advance, rather than get "worked out" as do gold fields. A SOLILOQUY

By Just a Common Every Day Man.
Restricted diet and no tobacco or coffee Dr. says.

That or funeral.
Might as well be funeral.

Better try another Dr., get a tonic or something.

Tried all the kinds I know of already and always worse after taking them a while.

Dr. says my nervous system is poisoned with the drugs in tobacco and coffee.

Other people can use them and be well.

Still I believe they always do have some weak spot.

Wonder if it's so, that these poisons do center on some one organ of the body in some people and scatter over the nervous system in others.

I'm sick anyhow.

Dr. says the only way to keep alive is to leave off the cause of the disease.

Says no medicine will help me as long as I keep using the narcotic drugs.

Oh, Lord.

Post says, "The most royal fun in all the world is the fun of being well."

Believe I had more fun in one hour and better feeling right inside me when I was a boy and healthy, than I ever got out of tobacco or coffee. Man's a fool to trade off good health for anything on earth.

Business goes right, home pleasant, friends friendly, days bright and peace reigns, when I'm well.

Devil to pay when I ain't.

Take all kinds of risks with my health that I wouldn't think of taking in a business venture.

Plain I am going into physical bankruptcy.

Wonder if I have any sense and nerve left.

Only one way to stop the rain.

Wake up, be a king, an absolute monarch over body and it will do well its part as a trained servant. But once you let the servant rule and the love of authority makes trouble.

We'll settle the question of management right now. Tobacco goes and coffee goes. Plain food and drink will rule, until I get well at least.

A hot drink at meals is all right,

Housekeepers who have been using a cheap alum baking powder cannot imagine how a trial of Cleveland's baking powder would surprise them.

The light, dainty cake and biscuit would warrant the small difference in price.

Grocers are authorized to give back your money if you do not find Cleveland's the best baking powder you have ever used.

Cleveland Baking Powder Co., N.Y.

and as I don't care for tea or cocoa, and can't digest coffee, believe I'll try Postum Cereal Food Coffee.

They say it is made from the nourishing part of grains, and looks like the finest coffee, that one gets to liking it as much as they ever liked coffee.

John Bradstreet works his brains to the tune of a big fortune every year, and said yesterday his brains had been clearer because his liver had a chance, since he quit coffee and used Postum Cereal.

Believe I'll stay in the procession awhile longer. I notice its the whiskey, tobacco and coffee cranks that get it in the neck, some way, from paralysis down, and I believe I'll train with Old Mother Nature awhile.

There is but one genuine, original Postum Cereal coffee, with a multitude of imitations offered as "just as good."

Only Four More Days.

You will have but four more days to buy a piano or organ at factory prices, as Saturday will positively be our last day. We now have only eight pianos left. I knew that when the people found out that we were doing just what we advertised, they would all go in short order. We give you as good a piano as is sold in your city for just about one half what you have had to pay for them. Just think of it; a new $300 piano for only $172, only one of them left, and no piano will be duplicated at the price made during this sale.

Kendall block, just north of post-office.

Saturday's Line of March.

Following is the line of march to be taken up by the old veterans next Saturday.

All comrades are requested to fall in line on lower Market street, ready to move at 12:30 p. m. standard time. The line of march will be east on Second street to Chillicothe, north on Chillicothe to Tracy's Park, counter-marching to Kendall's hall, where the mass meeting will be held.

Our fall opening of dress goods, millinery and wraps Tuesday, Sept. 21st.
